The litigants in the French cases:

Three French Sikh schoolboys were expelled in 2004 - Jasvir Singh, Bikramjit Singh and Ranjit Singh. Gurinder Singh was expelled in 2005 and Jasmeet Singh was expelled in 2006. Maha Singh has not been admitted in any school since last year. His expulsion was upheld at a hearing in July 2007. In September 2008, four French Sikh schoolboys were refused admission in school because they wore a patka (head covering). The school relented after they agreed to wear a 'scrunchie' over their top-knot.

Shingara Singh - His replacement drivers' licence was refused in 2005 and again in 2006. His passport renewal was refused in 2005. In all these cases the refusal was because he refused to remove his turban for his ID photos.

Ranjit Singh – a 69 year-old political refugee had his resident's card refused in 2002 for refusing to remove his turban for his resident's card photo.

The litigants in the Belgian cases:

Schoolboys from K.T.A. R.I.T.O. vocational school, Domein Speelhof, at B-3800 SINT TRUIDEN, Speelhoflaan 9:

Pawandeep Singh (16 yrs), Jaswant Singh (17 yrs) , Parminder Singh (15 yrs), Harjeet Singh(13 yrs) and Sukhdeep Singh (15 yrs)

Status of litigation in France:

On 30th May 2008, UNITED SIKHS lawyers filed, in the European Court of Human Rights, the first two cases - Jasvir Singh and Ranjit Singh, against the ban on religious signs in French schools. ON 15th December 2008, a communication was filed by UNITED SIKHS lawyers before the UN Human Rights Committee for the third boy, Bikramjit Singh. This was preceded, on 5th December 2007, by the Conseil D'etat upholding the expulsion of three French Sikh schoolboys', Jasvir Singh, Ranjit Singh and Bikramjit Singh, for wearing their turban to school; the remaining three boys Gurinder Singh's, Jasmeet Singh and Maha Singh's cases will also appealed to the European Court of Human Rights or the UN Human Rights Committee. The European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) dismissed last month the first legal challenge, since France passed a law in 2004 banning religious signs in schools, filed on behalf of Jasvir Singh, which was communicated to UNITED SIKHS lawyers on 16th July 2009.

Shingara Singh's driving licence case was lost in the highest French court, the Conseil Detat. An appeal was filed in the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) in Strasbourg on 11th June 2007. The ECt HR heard the appeal on 13th Nov 2008 which was dismissed as announced by a decision published on 27th November 2008 on grounds of security. The court held that whilst Shingara Singh's religious rights had been infringed, France was justified to ban the turban on the driver's licence photo on grounds that the turban posed a security risk of fraud and falsification. On 15th December 2008, Communications were also filed by UNITED SIKHS lawyers before the UN Human Rights Committee on behalf of Ranjit Singh and Shingara Singh in relation to their French government's refusal to issue a resident's card and passport, respectively, because they refuse to remove their turban for their ID photo.

Further, UNITED SIKHS has filed a complaint to the EU commission inviting the commission to institute infringement proceedings in relation to the above litigants. We have also filed proceedings with the HALDE (anti-discrimination authority in France) for the abovementioned litigants.

Status of litigation in Belgium

On 1st July 2008, the Hasselt Civil Court overturned a ban on the patka, a Sikh head covering, which was imposed by a state school, KTA Domein Speelhof, on five Sikh schoolboys since 2005. The school has filed an appeal which is expected to be heard late 2009.

UNITED SIKHS lawyers had filed a substantive case in the Hasselt magistrates citing a violation of the boy's right to manifest their religion. The lawyers had failed to obtain an emergency relief in the Hasselt magistrates court in September 2007 when they sought an order for the school to allow the affected Sikh schoolboys to wear their turban to school.

⇒ Judgment in the Gurinder Singh's case regarding turban ban in school

The case was fought on grounds of right to manifest one's religion as provided by article 9 of the European Convention on Human Rights and the right not to be discriminated against based on one's ethnicity. It was lost in the administrative court and it will be appealed. The court held that: "Considering the importance given to upholding secularist principles in French government primary and secondary schools, the action taken against a student who disobeys the legal ban on display of overt religious symbols does not signify curbing on freedom of thought, observance and religion. By enforcing the contested decision, the superintendent of the Creteil school academy has adhered to article 9 of the European convention on Human Rights;

The disciplinary action being contested constitutes the application of a general rule, and cannot be viewed as a measure of discriminatory nature, based upon "a belonging real or supposed to any ethnic group or a race" as forbidden by article 19 of the 30th December 2004 French law which prohibits discrimination on grounds of ethnicity."

⇒ Judgment in Shingara Singh Mann's Passport Case

The case was lost in the administrative court because the court held that the requirement to remove the turban for the passport photograph was not a 'disproportionate requirement'. However, the court for the first time acknowledged that the wearing of the Turban was inherent to the cultural and ethnical identity of the (Sikh) community". The government lawyer had argued:

- The requirement of an identity photograph with bare head for the issuance of a passport is a necessary restriction and proportionate with that of religious freedom, as has been judged already for the wearing of the veil or the Muslim scarf regarding to identity photograph for the issuance of a national ID card.
- Sikhs do not form an ethnic group, their historical origins being too recent;
- The decision to refuse the passport does not discriminate against Sikhs;
- The claimant does not enjoy any appreciable difference in position
- The removal of the turban is temporary only- limited to the time of taking the photograph and not in public.

Four teenagers between 16 and 17 years of age and two boys between the ages of 10 and 12 years were greeted with hostility at their schools today because of their refusal to take off their head coverings at the start of the new French school year.

In situations which shows the problem of wearing their turbans in schools is far from resolved for French-Sikh school children, the younger boys were told by their school principal that they were to remove their rimal (kerchief on their top-knot) and cut their hair. UNITED SIKHS and the French Turban Action Committee wrote to the administration of the school and Kudrat Singh, UNITED SIKHS-France Director, went with the parents of the children to meet with school officials. The school administration eventually gave in and allowed the boys to wear their rimals. The four older boys were refused education by their schools because of their refusal to remove their keskis (smaller turban). These boys are looking for alternative schools to continue their education.
